Vepco Files For Increase

Virginia Electric and Power Company filed with the West Virginia Public Service Commission for a $829,000 increase in annual revenues to help offset inflation, construction, and environmental costs.

The filing closely follows similar action in North Carolina earlier this week where Vepco requested a $2.5 million rate increase.

T. Justin Moore Jr., Vepco president, said the new rates being sought by Vepco in West Virginia would provide a return on investment comparable to that approved in Virginia last month.

In its June 28 rate decision, the Virginia Commission approved a return on investment of 8.56 per cent based on net original costs for customers in its jurisdiction and suggested that a fair and equitable return on investment be sought by Vepco in the other jurisdictions it serves.

Mr. Moore said the rates applied for in West Virginia would produce a return on investment of 8.56 per cent.

"A residential customer in West Virginia using 500 kilowatt-hours and currently receiving a monthly bill during the summer of $12.20 would pay $15.44 under the proposed new rates," Mr. Moore said.

With the increase, the average unit cost per kilowatt-hour for residential customers would be 3.01 cents, still lower than the cost in 1955, he said.

"When you consider that has happened to the cost of almost every other service or product in the last ten years, electricity is about the only product available today at less than 1955 prices," Mr. Moore added.

He said construction costs are increasing rapidly and the company must spend over $2.1 billion for new generating additions and support systems between 1971 and 1975, and an additional $1 billion between 1976 and 1979, for generating additions alone.

"This means that in 1972, we are spending over $486 million for new construction or more than $1 3/4 million each working day," he added.

"In order for Vepco to be able to borrow the huge amounts needed for construction, the company must be in a healthy financial condition to attract investors," he added.

Vepco provides electric service to about 17,000 customers in southern West Virginia.

Vepco has indicated that it will also seek additional rate relief for natural gas service in Tidewater Virginia and wholesale electric service throughout its system under the jurisdiction of the Federal Power Commission.

During the TWO-DAY, TWENTY-HOUR Labor Survey conducted in Appomattox on Friday and Saturday, August 11th and 12th, a total of 1668 persons registered when the Virginia Employment Commission conducted the survey at the request of the Thomasville Furniture Industries. The labor survey was termed a great success by both the V. E. C. and the representatives from Thomasville.
